AIMS AND SCOPE
A leading point of reference for scholars of Southern Europe, South European Society and Politics promotes both comparative and inter-disciplinary analyses, as well as offering innovative single country and sub-national studies. The journal acts as a forum for social, economic, cultural, contemporary historical and political approaches to research on the region, and is particularly keen to sponsor policy-focused sub-national studies. The journal acts as a forum for social, economic, cultural, contemporary historical and political approaches to research on the region, and is particularly keen to sponsor policy-focused sub-national studies. The journal also includes the South European Atlas series briefing papers on current developments and a comprehensive book reviews section.

South European Society and Politics covers both "old" and "new" Southern Europe, focussing on Cyprus, Greece, Italy, Malta, Portugal, Spain and Turkey. It is open to scholars working in any of the major social science disciplines—notably, political science, political economy, sociology, social policy, social anthropology and socio-legal studies—as well as to those working in the field of contemporary history. Published four times a year, South European Society and Politics also invites distinguished guest editors to oversee special issues.

Instructions for Authors
Submission of manuscripts
Please send all manuscript submissions to sesp@ics.ul.pt

South European Society and Politics is a refereed journal. Articles submitted should be original contributions and not under consideration for any other publication at the same time. Exceptions to this rule should be clearly indicated at the time of submission. Articles should be 7,500–9,000 words in length, including endnotes and references; the length of other contributions will be set by arrangement with the Editors. The text may be accompanied by a maximum of six diagrams (tables, figures, graphs, maps, etc.) Articles should be submitted to the Editors via email, preferably in Word. Authors should provide brief biographical detail including affiliation, status, recent publications and current mailing address. The article should begin with an abstract of 100 words describing in general terms its content and conclusions, followed by up to six keywords. Figures, graphs and tables must be of adequate quality for reproduction; if possible they should be provided as separate files in excel .tif or .eps formats. Photos should be high-contrast black-and-white glossy prints. All tables and figures should be referenced in the text and suitable captions should be provided. Articles should include a maximum number of 12 endnotes (not footnotes) and must conform to journal style. We regret that submissions which do not meet the above requirements cannot be accepted.

Style information
A full guide to journal style is available on our website http://www.tandfonline.com/FSES

Spelling: British punctuation and spelling should be used throughout. Dates should be in the form 5 September 1990; 1990–98; the 1990s. There should be minimal use of capital letters and full points (e.g., UK rather than U.K., government rather than Government).

Subheadings: main subheadings should be emblazoned, ranged left above the section, with initial capitals on main words; second level headings should be italicized, ranged left, with initial capitals for main words. Third level headings should be italicized, ranged left, with sentence initial capitalization only and the text following on after a full point.

Quotations: these should be in single quotation marks, double within single. Quotations of 40 words or more should be indented without quotes.

Notes and references
Notes should be gathered together at the end of the article, and should be numbered consecutively throughout the article. Bibliographical details for all cited works must be given in a ‘References’ section at the end of the article, which should adhere to the conventions of the Harvard referencing system, as shown in the examples below. Foreign language sources should be given in the language of publication, with the name(s) of the author(s) given in a Latin form. Where Greek characters are used, an English translation should be given in square brackets.

Copyright. It is a condition of publication that author assign copyright or license the publication rights in their articles, including abstracts, to the Taylor & Francis. This enables us to ensure full copyright protection and to disseminate the article, and of course the Journal, to the widest possible readership in print and electronic formats as appropriate. Authors retain many rights under the Taylor & Francis rights policies, which can be found at http://journalauthors.tandf.co.uk/preparation/copyright.asp. Authors are themselves responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce copyright material from other sources.

All authors will receive free online access to their article through our website (www.tandfonline.com) and a complimentary copy of the issue containing their article. Reprints of articles published in this journal can be purchased through Rightslink® when proofs are received or alternatively on our journals web-site.
