Keith Nolan's House to House: Playing the Enemy's Game in Saigon, May 1968 (Zenith Press, Osceola, Wis., 2006, hardcover $24.95) describes the portion of that battle fought by four battalions of the 9th Infantry Division in Saigon's District 8. It was a battle that tested those units and their commanders against a determined enemy on a suicide mission. In hindsight, most believe they were largely successful in that mission. This is no simple battle book, but rather a well-researched and superbly written account of the actions and experiences of the American soldiers, sailors and airmen who were caught up in the fighting in and around Saigon immediately before and during the VC assault of May 5-15, 1968. The Viet Cong and North Vietnamese launched additional Tet campaigns in May and August of that same year. American combat units finally withdrew from Vietnam in 1973 and South Vietnam fell to North Vietnam in 1975. Vietnam War Protests. By the time the war finally ended, after North Vietnamese troops captured Saigon in 1975, the plaintive anti-war slogan "What are we fighting for?" seemed a prophecy come true, as veterans returned home from Vietnam to find their own nation still bitterly divided. My Lai Massacre. Ultimately, he served three years under house arrest. The My Lai massacre left many Americans further disillusioned about the Vietnam War.
