“How do I pass this course?”

1. Come to class.

Regular Attendance: After six absences, each additional absence will cost 10 points of the attendance grade. Three tardies or early departures count as one absence.

CN 24, CN 25, CP 19,
CX 10, CX 11, CP 1

2. Read the textbooks

The two textbooks must be read in their entirety in daily increments. Note: On some days the class will be divided into Groups A and B. You will read the pages assigned to your group. Submit at least 150 words of reaction and reflection on Moodle (perhaps including a great quote!) Readings reported late will receive 50% credit.

CN 24, CN 25, CP 19,
CX 10, CX 11

3. Take the exams on time

To help you study for the four exams, study guides will be available.

CN 24, 25, CP 19, CX
10, CX 11, CP 1, CP 2

4. Write the stuff I ask you to.

a. Submit textbook reading reflections on Moodle.

b. Video Reactions: Throughout the semester we will see several video-taped presentations. Written reflections will be required on those videos.

CN 25, CP 19, CX 10,
CX 11, CP 1, CP 2

c. Biographies. Students must write 4 three-page biographies of missionaries or descriptions of missionary organizations. The biography should note: (1) some of the issues that the missionary struggled with, (2) contributions and even innovations

CN 25, CP 19, CP 1,

which the missionary brought to world outreach and/or (3) particular reasons why this missionary should rate particular mention in missions history. Each report should include a bibliography page showing all reading and research sources. At least one source in addition to the textbooks must be used in research. Late work will be penalized.

- d. Hands-on Missions Promotion. Calling the Church to fulfill the Great Commission and mobilizing resources for global evangelism has been a major task of great missionaries such as William Carey. During the semester you must spend at least 4 hours promoting or helping organize one of four missions opportunities: (1) Commission Unto Mexico, (2) Youth in Missions summer trips (3) the early October Cross-Cultural Orientation on campus or (4) the one-year opportunities in Europe and elsewhere for graduating seniors and qualified juniors. A written report including a detailed log of time spent is due the last week. The purpose of this assignment is to give you a sense of being a part of the ongoing movement to fulfill Christ's Great Commission

CP 19, CP 1, CP 2

Check your e-mails!

E-mail will be a primary way of communicating with you. "I didn't check my e-mail," will not be an adequate excuse for missing a piece of vital information.

"How will I be graded?"

Course letter grades will be assigned according to the standard breakdown (90% of total possible points = A, 80% = B, etc.). Possible points for each item:

4 exams @100 pts	400
4 Biographies @100 pts	400
Hands-on Missions Promotion	100
Attendance	3 pts per day
AV Reactions	10 pts each
23 Daily readings @10	230

Classroom Behavior

Proper in-class behavior is important to maximize group learning. Thus, talking during a lecture, neglecting cellphone etiquette (ringing during class, taking calls in class, text messaging during class, etc.), game-playing or Internet-browsing with a laptop, physical horseplay, and/or other disrespectful behavior is inappropriate. Students guilty of flagrant violations may be asked to leave the classroom. The instructor maintains the right, and merely on subjective grounds, to penalize a student's final grade up to one full letter grade for repeated instances of inappropriate behavior. Also the instructor maintains the right, in consultation with the Academic Affairs office, to drop the student from the course for behavior degrading to the learning environment.

Your mother doesn't clean our building. So, if you bring a soft drink or coffee to class, handle it carefully and clean up any spills. Do not leave cans, cups or other trash in or around your seat.

asses the modern Ecumenical Movement as a whole, and the World Missionary. Conferences in particular, it is essential to understand the foundational role played by the "great revivals" of the 19th century which swept across Europe and North America. Thus, it was that "the missionary movement came out of the evangelical awakening."9 The missionary movement, however, did not of course exist in a vacuum, but was heavily conditioned by historic circumstances. The dream of converting the heathen across the globe was stimulated by, and came on the heels of, colonial expansion and conquest and thus was largely dependent upon the Western powers, especially Great Britain and America, for its practical implementation. Modern. The first recorded baptism in Alta California. A Christian missionary of the Wisconsin Synod going to the Apache. With a dramatic increase in efforts since the 20th century, and a strong push since the Lausanne I: The International Congress on World Evangelization in Switzerland in 1974,[6] modern evangelical groups have focused efforts on sending missionaries to every ethnic group in the world. The missionary movement peaked during the Islamic Golden Age, with the expansion of foreign trade routes, primarily into the Indo-Pacific and as far south as the isle of Zanzibar as well as the South-Eastern shores of Africa. With the coming of the Sufism tradition, Islamic missionary activities increased. The Golden Age of Bible Translation and the Modern Missionary Movement. But the floodgates of Bible translation really opened with the modern missionary movement. Henry Martyn translated the New Testament into Urdu, Persian and Judeo-Persian before his early death at the age of thirty-one. Meanwhile, in India, William Carey and his associates were involved in the publication and translation of Scripture in forty languages. One Reformation theme with an interesting modern parallel is that of mobile phones. Mobile technology may prove as significant for the distribution of Scripture today as the printing press did for the Reformers. Tyndale was hounded to his death and his Bible burned wherever it could be found.
