The key terms of industrial sociology are "industry" and the concept of sociology. The industry here refers to the place where the goods and services. While the field cannot be confined by any one definition, various sociologists have tried to define industrial sociology in the following ways-. According to Miller and Form, "Industrial Sociology is a substantive area of general sociology which might more accurately be termed the sociology of work organisations or sociology of economy". According to J H Smith, "Industrial Sociology is concerned with industry (or any form of work organisation) as a social system, including those factors (technical, emotional, political) which affect the structure, the function and the changes in that system".
