Interpreting the Field

Accounts of Ethnography

Edited by DICK HOBBES
and
TIM MAY

CLARENDON PRESS • OXFORD
Contents

Foreword vii

PART I: FIELD-WORK

1. 'Like That Desmond Morris?'
   Gary Armstrong 3

2. Peers, Careers, and Academic Fears: Writing as Field-Work
   Dick Hobbs 45

PART II: POLITICS

3. Feelings Matter: Inverting the Hidden Equation
   Tim May 69

   Penny Green 99

PART III: ETHICS

5. Some Ethical Considerations on Field-Work with the Police
   Clive Norris 122

6. Dealing with Data
   Jane Fountain 145

PART IV: WOMEN AND ETHNOGRAPHY

7. Greenham Revisited: Researching Myself and My Sisters
   Sasha Roseneil 177
Contents

8. Racism, Sexuality, and the Process of Ethnographic Research

H. L. Ackers

Index
Table 1. Interpreting Field NMRMSG. NMRTYPE4. NMRTYPET. AS/400 and JES3 does not use or set the field for messages. RSCS does not use the descriptor codes because it does not use MCS. POWER sets the descriptor codes to X’0800’ if a destination userid was not specified. Interpreting the Field. Accounts of Ethnography. Edited by Dick Hobbs and Tim May. The aim of this book is to demonstrate the importance of qualitative research first through an examination of the data it produces, and second, Interpreting the Field. Accounts of Ethnography. As a result, Interpreting the Field, will have wide appeal for those who wish to understand the dynamics, advantages, and problems associated with ethnographic work: for example, undergraduates and post-graduates undertaking their own research. Nye: Interpreting field evidence. o.f. past ice sheets. degree of resolution that one wished to use in viewing the data. The various generic events, such as lips, occur as the resolution is changed. envelope, provide an interpretation of the theoretical framework often confusing field. to help evidence. of in of the the ice. movement in past ice sheets. ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS I am grateful to Dr J.H. Hannay, Dr M.E.R. Walford, and the referees for valuable comments.