Results: In patients who died from Covid-19-associated or influenza-associated respiratory failure, the histologic pattern in the peripheral lung was diffuse alveolar damage with perivascular T-cell infiltration. The lungs from patients with Covid-19 also showed distinctive vascular features, consisting of severe endothelial injury associated with the presence of intracellular virus and disrupted cell membranes. Histologic analysis of pulmonary vessels in patients with Covid-19 showed widespread thrombosis with microangiopathy. Alveolar capillary microthrombi were 9 times as prevalent in patients with Covid-19 as in patients with influenza. After contacting the Author of the Lancet Paper, the Lancet emailed me the PDF. This was simply a letter and the New Scientist article is actually more informative than what was published in the Lancet itself. I alerted a few Neurologists (who I know) about the New Scientist article and here's what one of them said:- "I have had similar experience of a high functioning legal secretary with similar appearances of gross hydrocephalus. I suppose intellect is relatively preserved because it is the white matter that is most reduced and the outer mantle of grey matter relatively preserved."

2. Choose the correct reason why the sentences are passive and not active: 1) Because the action (disinfecting) is more important than the agent (the cleaning staff). 2) Because the agent is more important than the action. 3. The cast has already been removed. 4. The first aid had been given before the ambulance arrived.

Leprosy (regarded, was regarded) as a punishment from god and patients (were isolated, isolated) and made social outcasts. In 1960 Mycobacterium leprae (cultured, was cultured) for the first time. Leprosy (is diagnosed, diagnoses) by painless maculae on the skin; the enlargement of peripheral nerves; the isolation of Mycobacterium leprae (performs, is performed) from the skin.
